

Cattle Yards

Posted on August 31, 2010 by Graham

We are regularly called to dehorn and/or castrate cattle in yards of poor design and strength, better suited to hold butterflies than cattle! It can turn a very simple procedure into a time consuming circus, dangerous to both man and beast.

Also, many procedures are much more safely and easily done on young animals. So, give us a ring and book in those calves for castration or dehorning before they look down on us.

Leo Cooney from Agriquality, Levin, has produced a book on yard design. Get hold of a copy ($15 from Agriquality) and if you are not sure about anything talk to Leo or myself. We have a copy at the clinic you are welcome to peruse.